Famous 4th Street Deli is One of Philly's institutions. Philly is not known for their delis and do not have that many that would be considered authentic "New York" style deli's. This though, is the exception. Huge, tasty sandwiches. A menu with all the usual suspects, matzha soup, potato pancakes, reubens, etc...This is a can't miss and one of Philly's absolute best eateries. Look at these sandwiches!!! Believe me - they are just as good as they look. If you are going to South Street, take the time to walk one block down to Bainbridge and eat here.

Okay, jumped the gun a bit, we were hungry. The pickle bowl was full when it got to the table, I swear.

Next, bring on the sandwiches. We sampled the pastrami and corned beef reuben and a roast beef sandwich. Keep in mind, these are the regular size sandwiches, they offer a “zaftig” size that’s bigger.

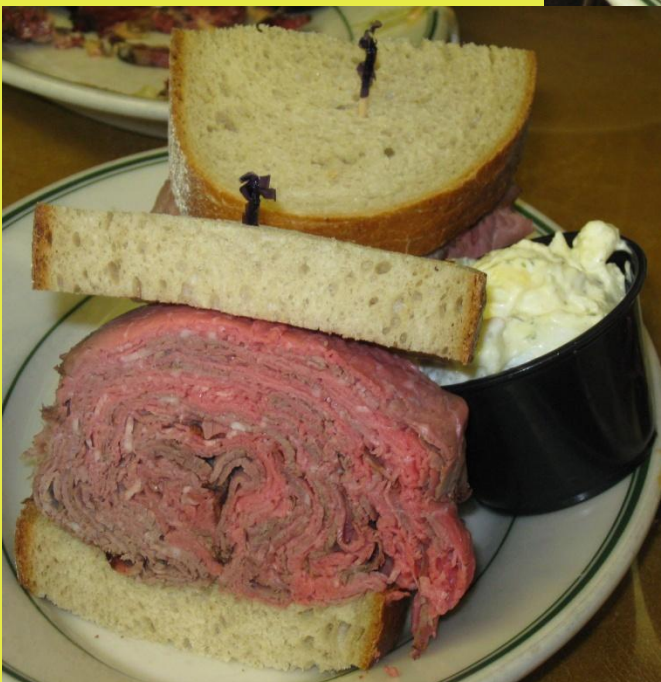

Corned beef reuben with potato pancakes.

Pastrami reuben
with cole slaw.

We also had a side order of fries. These were thick and crispy. Perfect
for dousing with vinegar.

Great, rare roast beef on rye, perfect with a little brown mustard and potato salad on the side.
